Today, it is difficult to imagine a living room without a sofa. When the first sofas on record were delivered in seventeenth-century France, the result was a radical reinvention of interior space. Symptomatic of a new age of casualness and comfort, the sofa ushered in an era known as the golden age of conversation; as the first piece of furniture designed for two, it was also considered an invitation to seduction. With the sofa came many other changes in interior space we now take for granted: private bedrooms, bathrooms, and the original living rooms. None of this could have happened without a colorful cast of visionaries-legendary architects, the first interior designers, and the women who shaped the tastes of two successive kings of France: Louis XIV's mistress Madame de Maintenon and Louis XV's mistress Madame de Pompadour. Their revolutionary ideas would have a direct influence on realms outside the home, from clothing to literature and gender relations, changing the way people lived and related to one another for the foreseeable future.

Drama, humor, and romance combine as the demon Ginger is caught between Heaven and Hell in this two-part story of redemption. Long ago, when they were both angels in Heaven, Lucifer tricked Ginger into going with him and his rebels when God threw them into Hell. Throughout most of Part 1, Ginger calls Hell her home, along with the other fallen angels (aka demons), although she never belonged there. She doesn't know it, however, since she has repressed her memories of Heaven, allowing her to be brainwashed into working as an Earth agent for Lucifer. By possessing humans, she does his dirty work on Earth and has become his "main squeeze." Like all demons, Ginger now has no concept of love--not until she meets Gary. Personal relationships with humans are strictly forbidden, but Ginger no longer cares what Lucifer thinks. She decides to leave Hell for Earth and take a chance with Gary, who has no idea he's fallen in love with a demon, no less one who has repeatedly tried to murder his priest. In Part 2 of the book, with help from a former enemy, Ginger finally recalls her life in Heaven and her love for God. Relieved that the priest is unharmed, she repents and is redeemed. God makes her leave her host's body, giving her a
